The President's Comments and chit chat

I start to write this section of the Newsletter with great sadness because I have to let those that have not heard the sad news know that Fred Thorn has passed away due to the horrible disease Covid 19.

Fred had been a very good Member of the Club for some years. He will be sadly missed by all.

Some of our Members wanted to go to the funeral but because of the restrictions will be unable to. However, the Club and some Members sent cards to his wife, and the Club is also arranging to send flowers for the funeral.

Sleep well Fred.

By the time you all read this, quite a few of us older Members will have had their first job and be waiting to have the second one. Let's hope we all have the jabs before too long and hopefully will be immune to this horrible disease.

Once again I would like to thank Les Rix and Brenda Kettle for their articles in last month's Newsletter. These articles I think give Barry and Val something to work with to make the Newsletter more interesting and give is something to read. More please.

I was looking through some back dated Cage & Aviary Magazines and in one was a piece about Ken Grigg and the first time breeding of a Siskin x Bullfinch. I got to wondering – it would be nice if Ken would write a piece about this for the Newsletter.

Barry and myself over many months have been looking for some Gouldians and a few other Australian Finches. We realise the pandemic has put a dent in people selling off their spare birds, but if anyone has any or knows of anyone with birds for sale, please ring Barry or me.

Pete

The Club Secretary's Comments

The passing of Fred Thorn was a shock to all of us. Fred was an active member of the club throughout his membership, supporting the club by always putting out a good show of birds in all the club shows in many different sections, Canaries, British and Parrotlike, and was often the winner of these classes. He was also a very generous man, regularly donating raffle prizes to raise money for the club.

Our deepest condolences go to Fred's wife & family. Fred will be missed by us all. RIP Fred.

Richard

Open Show

The club has been approached by The Southern Norwich Plainhead Canary Club for them to hold their show as part of our Open Show on Saturday 11th December 2021 (Covid19 permitting). Discussions with their secretary, Geoff Louth, about the finer details are ongoing, but the Dagenham CBS committee are happy and agreed with the general proposal and believe it will enhance the overall show and could increase the total of birds shown by 200+. Further details in next month's newsletter.

"How I got started" by Les Rix

I read with interest Barry and Brenda's articles about how they got into keeping birds. After you read this some of you may not like me anymore but I have decided to go on with this telling the God's honest truth. Some may like it and some may not but it's a part of my life that I cannot change

I did things that I am not particularly proud of today and some things I did I shouldn't be proud of but I am, so there will be a mixture of opinions between you all but I can live with that.

Right, as a young boy the garden birds always fascinated me. I would sit and watch them for hours feeding them on table scraps, cake crumbs, stale bread and such like, till one day the thought went through my head to try and catch one so, much to my mum's dismay, I repurposed her laundry basket into a bird trap along with a length of string and a stick. I was perched on the toilet (cos in them days the loo was outside) so, placing the usual scraps under the basket and placing the stick in just the right position, I held the string between my fingers, still perched on the toilet, and caught myself a Hen Blackbird. After close inspection I released her, none the worse for wear, and with the thought in my head of how surprisingly easy it was to capture her anyway. I met a friend (I suppose I was around 11 or 12 years old) who showed me his amazing collection of birds eggs. From that moment I was hooked and after a year I had the most amazing collection of birds' eggs known to man. It was my most prized possession. I really don't deserve to be here, as I have scaled to the top of electricity pylons for Kestrel eggs, combed railway lines for ground nesting birds ie Wagtails. Pipits etc. and I have climbed the highest trees at Passingford Bridge in Ongar for Crows eggs (God when I think about it!!).

One day I was introduced to a man called Tony Shoesmith who some of you may remember but, say what you like about Tony, he became my mentor for years introducing me to the likes of Terry Bedelle and Paul Joy and an array of other like minded people. In the meantime one of my neighbour's gave me some Budgies which I kept in my room slowly they died one by one. Anyway Tony gave me a Cock Greenfinch which I dearly loved and I had him for about 4 years.

At the age of 18 I found myself a father and married (you know the usual s**t that never works out) but I now have a partner of 38 years who understands why I do what I do (or maybe she's just fed up with moaning at me). When we had two small children I found myself out of work and no money and no way to support my family.. There is no worse feeling ever. Then I met a man who to this day I dearly love, Mr Ronnie Jones. Some know him as "Deafy" or "Ron the cage maker". He showed me everything I needed to know about catching birds, thus giving me the means to feed my family and clothe them. I reckon that me and Ronnie are probably responsible for a good percentage of Goldies and Linnets in aviculture today (at least I like to think so). Now before I get judged or gunned down, I'm not ashamed of what I did and if necessary would do it again. Needs must when children are involved. We would go to the bird house with our catches and come home with cash on the hip thus being able to provide for my family. I don't care who you are you would do the same were you in my position.

While we were at the bird house I was drawn by the stories told by the old-school bird men. I would listen with baited breath. One such person being Johnny Scott others being Dougie Priest and Lofty Bill, etc, etc. It was then that I decided to keep birds on a serious level which is why had it not been for those old-school bird men I wouldn't know what I know today. There are people that I owe so much to. Too many to mention. I loved and still love them today and cherish the memories we shared. Sadly some are no longer with us and I believe that they deserve a mention. Paul Joy, Johnny Scott, Dougie Priest, Tony Shoesmith, Stan Edwards, Grosvenor Ridgeway, John Broadbent and Jim Rutter – sleep well and God bless you all. R.I.P to you all. The ones still here you know who you are. So there it is, like it or not, but it's the God's honest truth in how I started (God I've found writing this quite emotional). Thanks.

PS If anyone starts panicking about what I've written here regarding the Wildlife and Countryside Act, I have been charged for the so called crimes that I committed and I have paid my dues and in Great Britain (well Britain anyway) the law cannot be applied retrospectively. Did I commit a crime or was I just looking out for my family? I'll leave that with you.

If I have upset or offended anyone writing this I'm truly sorry. Well enough waffling and I can assure you that after I edited this you will end up reading only half of what I originally wrote. So stay safe all of you. All the best hope to see you all again soon

Les Rix

Budgies and My Dad" by Brenda Kettle

When I was a kid growing up in the 1950's, life was quite hard. My dad, plus our neighbours, Reg, at number 17, and Peter, at number 25, all kept Budgerigars at home in garden aviaries, before cars became our normal part of life. Peter was the owner/manager of a pet shop in Wood Green, North London which helped to lead to the 'Budgie' population in our road.

All 3 aviaries were not much different in size, but, I remember, as a kid, keeping new born chicks warm in sterile cloths! Probably quite different to today's standards!

My dad had Budgies of every colour you could think of. One day a white budgie decided to make an escape for its freedom. Noooo! It was the only one he had, and he was determined to try and get it back. Well, there was dad, running to the top of our road, then out onto the main road towards Wood Green. All the local kids shouting "What you running for mister?". "My white Budgie", dad answered. There was dad and all the local kids running down the main road looking for this white budgie. Thankfully, the bird was retrieved from a tree in the main road, which had crossed over the local railway line, and finished up somewhat rather blackened, tired and dirty from its experience as it was only a youngster!!

My dad's budgies that he had then are obviously nowhere near the standard of Show Budgies bred today.

I often reminisce back to those days when all the local kids were running with my dad to catch that bird!

Brenda Kettle

Mick Pegram's "Spot the Member" give-away

The winner from the March 2020 Newsletter was DAVID DAWKINS so this is still being held over until the Club re-opens to give David a chance to claim his winnings.

Obituary – Fred Thorn

January has been a very difficult month for us all and many of you will already be aware of the sad and sudden passing of our friend and club member Fred Thorn. We extend our sympathy to Fred's wife Irene and to the family. Fred had an eclectic collection of birds in his aviary and shed including Fifes, Scotch Fancy, Raza's some small parrot like species, British Finches and a few Foreign Finches. Fred was always competitive. I remember well at one club points show when Fred didn't rate his chances and said to me under his breath "you don't stand a chance of winning at this club unless you show British" and promptly came second out of around 70 birds. Fred was a family man and well into retirement still did some work for his sons. Irene, his wife, would often join him at lifting time and take an interest in the other exhibits at shows and help him collect his birds and rosettes. Fred also enjoyed meeting bird keepers from other clubs and was eager to visit their bird rooms. He always enjoyed buying and selling surplus stock and had a keen eye for quality. Fred will be greatly missed throughout the local bird scene.
